Climate Change

Quaternary Period - a period of geologic time which stretches from about 2.5 million years ago to the present

Global Warming - the general increase in global temperature

Ice Cores - samples of ice, often many metres thick, gained by drilling through ice cover in cold environments

Evidence Of Climate Change

1. Thermometer Readings

- Measures from thermometers show that, since the 1970s, there has been a rapid global temperature increase of around 0.55 degrees Celsius
- In the northern hemisphere, the period between 1983 and 2012 was the warmest 30-year period of the last 1,400 years

Global average temperature has been gradually increasing over the past 150 years, from 13.5°C in the 1860s to 14.4°C in the 1990s

2. Glacier retreat

- Over the past 50 to 100 years, photographic evidence has shown that the world's glaciers have been melting, which has caused them to retreat
- The increase in global temperatures is causing glaciers to disappear and is increasing the melting of sea ice in the Arctic
- Up to 25% of the world's current mountain ice could disappear by 2050
- Ice cover is decreasing by 9% per decade

3. Ice cores

- As mentioned above, ice cores can be used to investigate globe warming
- Scientists that study the ice cores say there is clear evidence that there has been a rapid increase in temperature in the past decades

4. Early spring

- In recent years there have been signs of a seasonal shift - spring arrives earlier and winters tend to be less severe
- These seasonal changes affect the nesting and migration patterns of wildlife.

5. Rising sea levels

- Between 1901 and 2010, average global sea level rose by 0.19 m
